

TEXT FIELDS

Text fields let users enter and edit text and usually appear in forms. Users may enter text, numbers, or mixed-format types of input.

A label is a short description of the requested input. Labels are not help text, and they don't provide instruction, but they should be meaningful and clearly indicate what is expected.

Textarea inputs are used for freeform data entry. They are taller than text fields and wrap overflow text onto a new line. They are a fixed height and scroll vertically when the cursor reaches the bottom of the field. The large initial size indicates that longer responses are possible and encouraged.
